I was different," sighed Hazel. It was really dreadful, she felt, to be so different from other people, and yet rather wonderful, too, as if you were doing something that was so interesting, and having things to do, and feeling things that nobody else was feeling.

"Everybody is different," said Anne Shirley amusingly.

You are smiling," Hazel clasped a pair of very white, very dainty hands and gazed admiringly at Anne. "You have such a fascinating smile, Miss Shirley... such a haunting smile. I knew the moment I first saw you that you would understand everything. Sometimes I think I must be psychic, Miss Shirley... so much so that when I see people in the street, they say to me, 'Miss Shirley, you are looking at me.'"

"I don't know that they are," said Anne. "Everybody is different," said Anne Shirley amusingly.

Everybody is Different

I thought it was all over. He had promised to love me, and now he's breaking his promise. I can't believe he's doing this to me. What's wrong with me? Why can't I keep him? I'm not good enough for him, am I?

Oh, Hazel, I've been so lonely. I didn't know where to turn. I thought I'd found someone who cared about me, but now he's gone. I don't know what to do. I'm so lost.

Sitting in my room, sobbing, I heard a knock. It was my mother. She came in and held me tightly. She said she understood how I felt and that she was there for me. I felt a little better. She always knows how to make me feel better.

But even with her help, I can't get over it. It's like I'm stuck in this place, unable to move forward. I don't know how to let go. I don't know how to start living again. I'm just...lost.

The success that followed the making of artificial rubies and sapphires turned the attention of metalurgists to emeralds—another high-stardoned stone. Powdered emerald (emerald being a variety of beryl) was treated by the Vermento process, chrome being added to color the stone green and good imitations of true emeralds were made, each one with a coating of chrome, a few, since it is almost impossible to find a genuine emerald that is flawless.

Once again Vermento became the talk of the town, and his creations were producing a sensation very little different in color from the genuine.

When first put on the market the synthetic rubies fetched $120 a carat, but this rapidly fell to $500, and it is now $375 an ounce. This great difference lies in the price between the real and the synthetic, because the real comes at a greater expense to produce.
